Cognizant Selected as a 2021 TSIA STAR Award Finalist for its TriZetto Healthcare Products

Cognizant has been named as a finalist for the 2021 STAR Award from the Technology and Services Industry Association (TSIA). TSIA is the leading association for today's technology and services organizations, and for over 30 years, the TSIA STAR Award has been one of the highest honors in the technology and services industry.

Selected as a finalist in the Innovation in 'Enabling Customer Outcomes – Professional Services' category, Cognizant TriZetto Healthcare Products was shortlisted for this prestigious award for demonstrating significant results of its benefits administration services offering to healthcare clients, including digital automation, payment accuracy, turnaround time, and claims backlog.

Many day-to-day benefits administration functions, including enrollment and claims, can be time-consuming and employee intensive. TriZetto Benefits Administration Services offers an efficient, automated, and cost-effective means of supplementing business operations.

"Our goal has always been to be the company of choice for modernizing outcome-based services at healthcare companies," said Gary Mirka Associate Vice President of Cognizant TriZetto Product Consulting Services. "We're honored by this recognition by TSIA which validates our leadership and expertise in this important sector of the market. Our innovative technology solutions and expertise help companies improve administrative functions and operations while at the same reduce costs."

Companies seeking a STAR Award undergo a rigorous evaluation process, with the winners selected by TSIA's research practice advisory board members. Since its inception in 1990, STAR Awards acknowledge the contribution of companies of all sizes to the continual improvement of technology and services delivery industrywide.
